

PRINCE CHITWOOD

(1949 - 2005)

PRINCE CHITWOOD

AGE 56YEARS

Died suddenly on 11th October 2005 of a Myocardial Infarction.

After spending his formative years in Toronto, Canada, where he studied to be an Archaeologist at the Wilfred Laurier University. He moved to England in 1978 working for the Museum of London enjoying the many trips abroad on archaeological excavations mainly in North Africa. He moved to Lincoln in 1989 to work for the City of Lincoln Archaeology Unit. There he met his partner Georgina.

After numerous holidays to Grenada over the last ten years, an island and its people they grew to love, they decided to move here when Georgina retired from nursing last year. Prince enjoyed the short time he spent here, and loved his house and garden in L'Anse Aux Epines. With an outwardly gregarious and cheerful personality, he made many new friends; as well as keeping in touch with people he had met on earlier trips. He had a quiet, serious side and was involved in heritage and environmental issues, working on projects for the Willie Redhead Foundation.

Unfortunately his life was cut short, but it was interesting, happy and full. He had managed to achieve most of his ambitions during this time. Georgina and his many friends will sadly miss him.

Ian Blair

Prince and Peter James in Tunisia (top) and Libya 1979 from Peter.

